Investiguemos 10 Fisica 210.pdf Alterations in the tau protein in the anterior horn cells of the rat spinal cord following a compression injury. In this study, alterations in tau protein were found in the anterior horn cells of the spinal cord of the rat after a localized compression injury. Tau protein was studied immunocytochemically with monoclonal antibodies against tau protein and western blot analysis was performed. The immunocytochemical studies demonstrated alterations in the tau protein in the anterior horn cells at 12 and 48 hours and 1 and 7 days after injury. The Western blot analysis revealed elevated levels of tau protein in the ipsilateral side of the spinal cord compared to the contralateral side at 1, 7, and 14 days after injury. The observed alterations in the anterior horn cells may have a relationship with regeneration after central nervous system injuries.  $\int_0^{\infty} \frac{1}{\sqrt{r}}$
